THE SONG OF LIGHT.

BY WM. FITZ PALMER.

From the quickened womb of the primal gloom

The sun rolled black and bare;

And the first light of the dawn, in the first

Of the thread of the golden hair;

And when the first of the firmament

Arose on its airy spars,

I pencilled the heaven's matchless blue,

And spangled it round with stars.

I painted the flowers of the Eden bowers,

And their leaves of living green;

And mine were the eyes in the sinless eyes,

Of Eden's virgin queen;

But when the first of the firmament

Had featured the mortal spell,

In the silvery sphere of the first born year,

To the trembling earth I fell.

When the wave that burst o'er a world accurst

Their work of wrath had sped,

And the Ark's lone dove—trial and true—

Came forth from the dead;

With the wondrous gleams of my bridal dreams,

I bade their terror cease.

As I wrote on the roll of the storm's dark scroll,

God's covenant of peace.

Like a pall at rest on a senseless breast,

Night's funeral shadow slept—

Where shepherd swains in Bethlehem plains,

Their lonely vigils kept;

When I flashed on their sight the herald bright

Of Heaven's a redeeming plan,

As they chanted the hymn of a Saviour born—

"Joy! joy! to the outcast—man!"

Equal favor I show to the lofty and low,

On the just and the ungodly;

Even the blind, whose vain spheres roll in darkness and tears,

Feel the smile the best smile of a friend;

Nay the flower of the waste by my smile is embraced.

As the rose in the garden of kings;

And the crystal ball of the worm I appear—

And lo! the gay butterfly wings.

From the sentinel steep by the night brooded deep,

I gaze with unslumbering eye,

While the cynosure star of the mariner

Is blotted out from the sky;

And guided by me through the merciless sea,

Though swept by the hurricane's wing,

His compassless, lone, dark weltering bark,

To the haven home safely I bring.

I awaken the flowers from their star spangled beds;

The birds in their chambers of green,

And mountain and plain harmony again,

As they back in their maternal breast.

O! if such the glad work of my presence to earth,

Though faint and fleeting the while,

What glory must rest on the home of the blest,

Ever bright with the Deity's smile.

National Thanksgiving.

BY THE PRESIDENT OF THE UNITED STATES OF AME-

RIC—A PROCLAMATION.

WHEREAS, It has pleased Almighty God, during the year which is now come to an end, to renew our beloved country from the fearful scourge of civil war, and to permit us to secure the benediction of peace, unity and harmony, with a great enlargement of civil liberty; and, whereas, our Heavenly Father has also, during the year, gracially averted the calamities of foreign war, peace and famine, while our granaries are full of the fruits of an abundant season; and, whereas, righteousness exalts a nation, while sin is a reproach to any people; now, therefore, I, Andrew

Johnson, President of the United States, do hereby recommend to the people thereof, that they do set apart and observe the first Thursday of December as a day of national thanksgiving to the Creator of the universe, for these deliverances and blessings; and I do further recommend that on that occasion the whole people make confession of our national sins against His infinite goodness, and with one heart and one mind implore the Divine guidance in the ways of national virtue and

The High Prices.

Gentlemen who have been putting off the purchase of a new overcoat for a year or two, in the expectation that when this cruel war was over they would be able to buy one at the old prices, are a good deal disappointed this fall to find that a tolerable overcoat costs sixty dollars, and a good one ninety. The old coats having been lined, boned, cleaned, mended, buttoned, and collared, till the skill of no tailor or dyer can make them decent again, the distracted owners are asking the question, with which Fourth of July orators used to begin the conclusion of their orations,

"And, now, fellow citizens, what remains for us to do?"

We must confess, says the New York

Weekly Review, that the high prices prevailing just now, seven months after the peace, are not the entertainment to which we supposed ourselves invited. House-keepers did not expect, at the close of a productive season, to pay sixty-five cents a pound for butter; nor did they suppose that coffee would cost nearly as much with gold at 146, as it did when gold was at 250. If coffee is so abundant, why are sausages thirty cents a pound, which used to be eleven?

Why farmers' barns stuffed and crammed with remarkably large hay ricks, why has a milk gone up again to twelve cents a quart? Granting that apples and pears are scarce, must a small pear, that can be eaten in four bites, bring the retailer twenty five cents? And is it really true that a barrel of apples is worth ten dollars? As to coal, at twelve dollars a ton, are the

THE WESTERN CITIZEN

FRIDAY MORNING, NOV. 24, 1865.

An old salt, who had been on a bender, had got what he termed "sublimely mystified" by his frequent intubations of the "critter." Staggering along the streets, he thought to go to the theatre, and pass the remainder of the evening. Following some men whom he thought bound on the same voyage, he found himself in what he took to be the pit, but it happened to be the meeting house and the minister was preaching from the text wherein is mentioned the sheep and the goat, and in order to make an impression upon his congregation, he puts the significant question: "Who, would wish to be a goat?" and then pauses, and then, with greater emphasis, asks, "Who will be a goat?" Our tipsy auditor could not brook the irony, and at once a responsive: "As nobly else (sic) he be it, I'll be the (hic) goat, rather (hic) than the play should stop."

Augustus Doolittle had been in a store about three months when his employer asked him what part of the business he liked best. To which the elegant youth replied: "Shuttin' up, sir."

The Press: It expresses truth, represses error, impresses knowledge, de-presses tyranny, and op-presses none.

Patrick gave his testimony in the riot case. "Be jabbers, the first man I saw coming at me was two brick bats."

"My friends," said a returned missionary at a late anniversary meeting, "let us avoid sectarian bitterness. The inhabitants of Hindoostan, where I have been laboring for many years, have a proverb that 'Though you bathe a dog's tail in oil and bind it in splints, you cannot get the crook out of it.' Now a man's sectarian bias is simply the crook in the dog's tail, which cannot be eradicated; and I hold that every one should be allowed to wag his own peculiarity in peace!"

A Philadelphia paper tells a laughable story of an incident of the recent Episcopal Convention in that city. A party of five clergymen set out to attend the inauguration exercises of the American Union Convention, which were, as they understood to be held at the Academy of Music. The place of meeting had been changed to another hall, but of this they knew nothing. Considering themselves entitled to seats on the platform, the reverend gentlemen entered by the stage door. They walked rapidly by the doorkeepers—who mistook one of them for Edwin Forrest—and said "good evening," and were astonished to find themselves between two lines of soldiers in paper helmets. "Make less noise or you'll be heard in front," said a gruff soldier, shifter, and the unhappy clergymen discovered that Mr. and Mrs. Charles Keen were playing Hamlet and Gertrude close beside them, and that only a thin canvas partition separated them from the actors and audience. Of course they became hasty retreat, just in time to avoid having their black coats and white ties exhibited to the assembled thousands by a change of scenes.

There are no old maids in Japan. If a girl's charms do not capture her a husband, the law takes the matter in hand, and provides her with one.

A wedding was interrupted lately in Colchester, England, by levity of the groom. All went well until the clergyman required the bridegroom to repeat after him the words "I, (take—) to be my wedded wife * * * for better, for worse," etc., when he altered the formula to "I'll take her for better, but not for worse." The minister immediately closed the book, and quitted the church.

A certain attaché of the Treasury Department in Washington, who is well known as an inveterate toper, on being asked by a jocular friend what he did for a living, replied, "I suck a bottle part of the time, and the United States Treasury the rest."

Sir Walter Scott tells a story of a Scotch minister, who, on an icy winter Sabbath, threatened his congregation with everlasting torments in thick-rimmed ice. Being taxed with the heretical tendencies of such a version, the crafty Scotch replied: "I'd no try to scare sinners this cold weather by making 'em think of a hot fire."

The late letter of Massa Greeley to his colored brethren of North Carolina, has inspired the recipient with great respect for him. A resolution thanking the young colored men who had lent papers in the cause of universal freedom was lately passed by the North Carolina Negro Convention now in session at Raleigh, when a question arose as to whether or not it applied to "Brother Greeley." A leather-colored character explained that Massa Greeley was not a colored man, "when an individual, black as the ace of spades, remarked that he always supposed Brother Greeley to be a full-blooded nigger, but that if he wasn't, den he deserved to be."

A clergyman called on a poor parishioner, whom he found bittily lamenting the loss of an only son, a boy of about four or five years of age. In the hope of consoling the afflicted woman, he remarked to her that "one so young could not have committed any very grievous sin and that no doubt the child had gone to heaven." "Ah, sir," said the simple hearted creature, "but Tommy was so sly—and they are all strangers there!"

"You do wrong to fish on Sunday," said a clergyman to a lad he saw so doing. "Well, sir," replied the boy, "it can't be much harm, for I ain't cotelched nothing."

Captain Girardi, of Augusta, Georgia, has invented an engine which he manufactures rapidly and of the finest quality. He supplies the city of Augusta, and says that when his establishment is perfected and in full operation, he can furnish ice at one cent per pound.

The Cleveland papers tell a story of a young lady in that city who was thrown from a buggy by a runaway horse, and struck the curbstone, her "waterfall" breaking the force of the blow and saving her neck. It was bad for the waterfall but good for the young lady.

The Philadelphia Age says a leading coal merchant in that city returns an income of $400,000.

General Bragg is about to start a cotton plantation in Alabama with free negro labor.

It has been determined not to restore the estate of Ex-Governor Wise, of Virginia.
